

A grid comprising drawn polymeric strips in at least two different directions, with the strips being bonded together in the zone or zones of overlap, may comprise at least one zone of overlap comprising at least two spatially separated bonding points or lines. These grids may exhibit improved strength and can be manufactured in a very efficient manner.

5